GENERAL GUIDELINES

The board of editors warmly welcomes contributions in the wide scientific area of Law and the Humanities. When considering submitting a contribution, please check the guidelines at <https://www.humanitiesandrights.com/journal/index.php/har/about/submissions>.

Manuscripts must be submitted online through <https://www.humanitiesandrights.com/journal/index.php/har/about/submissions>.

Authors need to register with the journal prior to submitting or, if already registered, can simply log in and begin the five-step process.

The submitted text should not have been published previously, nor is it sent to another journal for consideration (or an explanation has been provided in 'Comments to the Editor').

Manuscripts are written in (American or British) English, as long as contributions are internally consistent. If English is not the author's first language, he/she is responsible for a thorough language review before submitting a text. The board of editors may refuse a text for linguistic reasons, or ask for a second or third language editing. The editors do not endorse nor takes responsibility for language editing.

Manuscripts are initially reviewed by the editors. At this stage manuscripts may be rejected without peer review if it is felt that they are not appropriate for the journal.

After principal acceptance, manuscripts are sent out for peer review, usually two anonymous independent reviewers. The editors will never communicate with the author on the names and expertise of the reviewers.

Based on the feedback from these reviewers and the editors' judgment, the manuscript is either 'accepted', 'rejected' or 'accepted under condition of necessary revision'.
